四、閱讀測驗：每題 2 分，共 14 分

Word + Word Everyone knows how to add. One plus one is two. You may notice that words can also be added together. For example, “homework” is “home” plus “work”. Words like “homework” are called compound words. Just put two or more words together, and you get a compound word. Lots of words we use every day are compound words, like “notebook” (“note” and “book”), “restroom” (“rest” and “room”), and “newspaper” (“news” and “paper”). Are compound words too easy for you? Try blend words! A blend word is created by putting parts of two words to form a new one. For example, we take “cos” from “costume” and put it with “play”, and we get “cosplay”. “Cosplay” means to dress up as a character from a comic book, anime, or video game. Another example is to take “br” from “breakfast” and “unch” from “lunch” to make the word “brunch”. “Brunch” is a meal that people have in the late morning. Blend words are getting popular these days. Interesting words like “spork” (from “spoon” and “fork”) are created every day. Some blend words may not be seen as real words, but some of them are added to dictionaries. If the word you created is listed in the dictionary one day, wouldn't that be fantabulous? 📖 plus 加上 add 添加 blend 混合 form 形成 character 角色

It is quite common for Taiwanese families to have a BBQ (barbecue) party during the Mid-autumn Festival. Of all the food for the barbecue, sausages can never be forgotten. Also, when you visit temples in the afternoon, you can see stands which sell grilled sausages at the square.

Actually, sausages can be found in almost all parts of the world. People have different kinds of sausages with different stuffings and cooked in different ways. For example, Korean sausage, or soondae, is usually boiled in soup to make the sausages and the soup more delicious. White sausage, or weisswurst, is a well-known sausage in Munich, Germany. People often heat weisswurst in hot salted water and eat the white sausage for breakfast and lunch with the famous German bread, Brezel. Salsiccia is the name for Italian smoked sausage, which is made with pork meat, pork fat and many spices. On Christmas Eve, Italians usually have salsiccia cooked in the oven and eat salsiccia when they get home from church. Salsiccia can also be put onto a pizza or into pastas.

No matter where you are in the world and no matter what kind of sausage you have in your country, sausage is surely one popular food in our life!
