Do you know cassava, a kind of plant?

People plant it and eat its large roots. Cassava farmers ___36.___ by growing cassava, so many cassava farmers are poor. A business in Brazil, Questtonó, tries to change this. They use cassava in another way, and it keeps farmers away from poor life. ___37.___They bought cassava from the farmers in one state of Brazil, and another business AmBev made beer with cassava root powder. In 2018, they had their first beer "Nossa," and it means "ours."

Later, they did the same thing in other states, and there came "Magnífica" and "Legítima." People can only get it in its birth state. The beer then became one of a kind in the state. Also, the price of the beer is low, so many people buy it. The beer is popular, and many only-here beers start to show up then.

Questtonó and AmBev called this plan "Roots Plan." This plan already helps lots of farmers and their family. They want to___38.___ and help poor people there to have a good life.

Thomas: Grandpa, it's nice and warm here. I like spring best.
Grandpa: Me, too.
Thomas: Look, Grandpa! There's a tree stump over there.
Grandpa: Hmm. It's freshly cut. Look at these tree rings carefully, Thomas.
Thomas: Why do trees have rings, Grandpa?
Grandpa: The rings tell the life story of a tree. During each growing season, a tree trunk grows thicker. If the season is wet, the tree grows faster and the rings become wider. However, in a dry season, the tree grows more slowly, and the rings get narrower.
Thomas: I see. So we can learn about the change of the weather from the tree rings.
Grandpa: You can say that again. The tree rings can also tell us one more thing.
Thomas: What's that, Grandpa?
Grandpa: You can find a tree's age by counting its rings.
Thomas: Wow! That's interesting. Let me count. One, two, three, four…

Turkish coffee is more than a drink in Turkey. It has a history of more than five hundred years, and it is still very popular today. Friends and family like to get together and enjoy Turkish coffee. Besides drinking it, people also use it to look into the future.

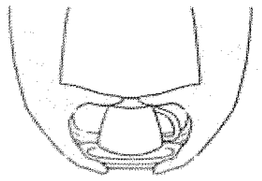

So, how do you use Turkish coffee to tell the future? First, finish the hot coffee. There are some coffee grounds in the coffee, so keep the grounds in the cup after drinking it. Next, put a plate on top of the cup. Then turn them upside down and wait for the grounds to cool. After a few minutes, turn the cup upright and look at the pictures of the grounds inside. These pictures give clues about one's future. For example, a fish means money, and a bird means something lucky.

Reading Turkish coffee grounds is fun. The shapes can't show everything about life, but they may give people a little help. Would you like to try a small cup of Turkish coffee and see your future?
